Professor Regina F. Burch brings Capital University Law School diverse academic, legal and business experience. Previously, she was a visiting professor of law at DePaul University College of Law where she taught Business Organizations and Intellectual Property Transactions for corporate attorneys. She practiced corporate, securities and intellectual property transactional law with the firm of Testa, Hurwitz and Thibeault, LLP in Boston, MA and then McCutchen, Doyle, Brown and Enersen, LLP in Palo Alto, CA. While a student at the University of California, Hastings College of the Law, Professor Burch was the recipient of the UC Hastings Long Scholarship and the Charlotte & Cecil Poole Scholarship and served as the senior symposium editor for the Hastings West-Northwest Journal of Environmental Law & Policy.

A graduate of the Sloan School of Management, her fields of emphasis were corporate strategy and information technology. She went on to work as a consultant and analyst for such corporations as Shaman Pharmaceuticals; Ernst & Young, LLP; Chiron Corporation and VISA International. At Capital, Professor Burch teaches Business Associations, Corporate Finance, Seminar: Selected Topics in Corporate Governance, and Agency for the Academic Success Protocol and serves as the faculty advisor to the Corporate and Business Law Association. Her research interests include the regulation of corporate law and the development of internal corporate governance structures.
