*Seminar description: Law & Governance - This course will introduce students to a new phase in the development of the administrative regulation. This new stage—governance—is becoming more prevalent in regulatory and corporate policy, and is of increasing relevance for lawyers seeking to help their clients achieve goals in contemporary society. The course will introduce students to the ideas behind the new governance. It will show them how current regulatory and corporate governance activities reflect and embody these concepts. And it will guide them in learning the strategies to negotiate effectively these new features of administrative law, regulation and corporate policy. For LL.M. in Business candidates the substantial research paper requirement can be satisfied in this course.
